

SILVER IN THE GREAT WEST.

A Trip in That Section Opens a Gold Man's Eyes.

H. W. Hoyt, secretary of the Gates Iron Works, of Chicago, now in Boston, has just returned from a business tour in the West, through Colorado, Nebraska and Kansas, to the very heart of the silver country. Mr. Hoyt's views of the political conditions of the country are not so rosy as the tenor of the dispatches which are already predicting a recession of the silver tide. He says:

"Anybody who imagines that there will be a decrease in the silver sentiment west of the Missouri river, and, I might almost say, west of the Mississippi river, reckons without his host. I talked politics with every one I met there, of all classes, and I found the opinion all one way. And the people are perfectly honest about it. I tell you, you can't imagine the hardship of the farmer's life in the West. The less you have been out there, the larger two years they didn't raise a crop, large or small, large enough to pay the interest on their mortgages. This year they have splendid harvests, but what good are they when they can't get anything for them, they say. We may believe that there is something wrong about the distribution, but the farmer does not see it altogether that way. He cannot get money to move his crops, and the silver men at his ear have no difficulty in persuading him that there is a trouble in the money itself. It may be true that most of the farmers own their lands, but I have found it just the contrary. Most of them are in debt, and largely in debt, and barely able to pay the interest."

"Let me tell you the story of a college friend of mine who settled ten years ago as a farmer in southern Wisconsin, which is one of the garden spots of the country. He had inherited a good farm, but he sold it and bought a large one, giving a mortgage. For five or six years he prospered and was reducing the debt fast. Then came drier times, but he still paid the interest on the mortgage. For five or six years he has not been able to pay even that. Now, this man is, or was, a 'sound money' man. He is educated in that belief. He is, and his wife is, too, college bred. He is hard and level headed. There isn't a corporation in the country keeps its books in better style. I have looked over them, and I have seen what he tells me, that in ten years the value of his crops have been halved, and even quartered. And economic! 'Why,' he said to me with tears in his eyes, 'we don't spend as much on nicknacks and pleasure in a year as you do in a week! We don't spend anything! And we work from morning till night! Now, this friend of mine is not a silver man. He is not convinced by arguments, but he says that any change will be welcome to him. It cannot be worse. It cannot be worse. There are thousands just like him. It is wrong to under estimate their force."

"These reformers are terribly in earnest. It won't do to call them whimsical and Anarchists just because they cannot afford to keep slaves and are unhappy. They are far from being Anarchists. Why, they're chiefly New England or Eastern boys, descendants of good old Puritan stock, who left your overworked section and went West to open up the land. That's what has settled Denver and Colorado Springs, too. You don't want to make any mistake about those people being fools or backwoods men. They're as sharp as steel traps, and Denver is a typical modern American city. You cannot imagine the growth of the silver craze, if you can call it that. I have been astonished to watch its strides right in Chicago, my home. I was educated up to gold standard, and have always loved it, but I am free to confess that I have been rather shaken in the past two weeks. I have heard silver talked on all sides. Out there a gold man never opens his mouth, if there is one. When I get back home, even my partner, who had always been a strong gold man, had changed his opinion, and assailed me with silver arguments."—Springfield Republican (Gold)

"THE PEOPLE'S WILLIAM"

Julian Hawthorne So Describes the Democrat Candidate.

Writing his impressions of this same trip, Julian Hawthorne, the author, who was also a member of the Bryan party, says:

"England has long enjoyed the monopoly of a 'People's William' in her Gladstone. Now in William J. Bryan, we Americans have our own."

"There is no question that the nominee of the Chicago convention represents the feeling and purpose of the masses of this country—the men who outnumber and can outvote the rest; who care nothing for bosses and machine politics, but act upon the belief that in this Republic a man may have what he wants, if there be enough of him and he takes the trouble to ask for it."

Then speaking of the seething mass of men that met the candidate at every point and the wild scramble to shake his hand while they continued to yell in a frenzy of enthusiasm for the man and the cause he represented, Mr. Hawthorne continues:

"I have seen and participated in football scrimmages; a thousand of the fiercest of such battles could not compare with the headlong, desperate struggle of these men to see and touch the silver standard bearer. The expression in their faces was delight and eagerness mingled—intense delight, wild eagerness. They eddied, whirl pool-like, around the car; they carried it by assault; a score and more got on board and forced their way to the platform on which Mr. and Mrs. Bryan stood. For a time there was danger that the latter would be swept off and lost; men could not clutch at the elixir of life more frantically than did these at their chosen candidate."

"It was a strange sight to look down upon—those convulsed, upturned faces, and those outstretched hands. How they reached outward and upward! Dozens of them would come up bunched together, and Bryan and his wife would touch them with a single sweep of their own. Shaking hands otherwise than by whole sale was no longer attempted. I cannot forget those hands, so different, one from another; so individually characteristic, and all reaching to the object of their desire by a common impulse. A great artist could make a powerful picture of those hands of the people."

"But I have seen and written enough of crowds for the nonce. One might think after making this journey, that America was wholly composed of excited crowds shouting for Bryan. I am free to confess that I have learned a great deal on this trip that I did not know before and would not have believed. I have learned something about the people of America—their wishes and their power. "Mr. Bryan is a religious man, and he believes that his wonderful success is only indirectly the result of his own or other men's efforts—it was not due to the congenial speech or to the partisan machinery; it came even in the face of what seemed most likely to abstruse it."

"In a private with me yesterday morning he showed me how this was so. I am not at liberty to do more than convey the general scope of the conversation; it was interesting to me, and deepened my personal regard for this broad and stony young man. He deserves success; he can bear it, and it is my belief that he will have it."

"But it is not myself," he said, "What ever I am is the cause that I represent. But many men may be inspired by a great cause; it is only for a man such as Bryan to rise to such a height of it and become its full embodiment and champion. He is modest; but, because he is modest, he is fearless and proud."

The True Philosopher.

In winter time he's happy
When he's pelted by the snow;
In summer time he's singing
As he gathers up a rose,
And somehow earth is brighter
For the happy way he goes!

If dark the tempest's frowning
And no stars are in the night,
He thanks God for a shelter,
And sleeps, and dreams of light;
And somehow earth is brighter,
For he ever makes it bright.

And so, in joy and sorrow,
He goes his earthly way,
And trusts God for tomorrow,
And does His will to day;
And somehow earth is brighter
For that lesson; "Love—obey!"

Fast Living Americans.

We new world people are fast living, and in nothing is this more observable than in our reckless irregularity as to sleep and diet. We alternately starve and gorge ourselves, doing each in the most irregular and hasty manner, with out regard to the nutritive value of the food consumed, or the deleterious effects upon the digestive organs or the terrible tasks imposed upon them at the most unseasonable hours. It is little wonder we are a nation of dyspeptics, and prone to constipation piles etc. It is to their efficacy as a remedy for those ailments that Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets owe their unparalleled popularity. Good results always follow their use in all cases of derangement of the liver, stomach and bowels.

The Election in Alabama.

On Monday, August 3, an election was held in Alabama for State and county officers and members of the legislature. Congressman Albert T. Goodwyn, free-silver man, was the candidate of the Republicans and Populists for governor, and the Democratic nominee for that office was Joseph F. Johnston, also a free silver man. The majority for Johnston as shown in the returns amounted to 41,889, which is an increase of 14,307 over the Democratic majority in 1894. The Democrats control three-quarters of the lower house and two-thirds of the Senate. The Populists alleged gross frauds. Public Opinion.

TURNING GRAY AND THREATENED WITH BALDNESS The Danger is Averted by Using AYER'S HAIR VIGOR

"Nearly forty years ago, after some weeks of sickness, my hair turned gray and began falling out so rapidly that I was threatened with immediate baldness. Hearing Ayer's Hair Vigor highly spoken of, I commenced using this preparation, and was so well satisfied with the result that I have never tried any other kind of dressing. It stopped the hair from falling out, stimulated a new growth of hair, and kept the scalp free from dandruff. Only an occasional application is now needed to keep my hair of good, natural color. I never hesitate to recommend any of Ayer's medicines to my friends."—Mrs. H. M. HARRIS, Ayer, Neb.
